The William H. West Big Jubilee Minstrels.

There can be no question regarding the solidity of The William H. West Big Jubilee Minstrels, an organization comprising not only the cream of the burnt cork talent, but one generally recognized on the grounds of actual novelty. The West Minstrels are scheduled for next Tuesday, Sept. 19, at the Barre opera house.

Speaking of this company, the New Haven, Ct., Register, for September 2, says: "Never have such excellent singers and fine comedians come to the New Haven theatre as those who occupied the boards at last night's performance of William H. West's minstrels before an audience that crowded that popular theater. It was an abundance of mirth and music from start to finish. The introductory overture by the entire company was something long to be remembered, and the audience showed its appreciation by loud and long applause."
